Student Research Scholarships and Awards

Most students at the School of Medicine engage in research projects at some time during their period of residence. The results of original research are often published in leading scientific journals and presented at national meetings of scientific societies. Major contributions have been made by medical students participating in research programs at Johns Hopkins and other institutions. Please visit the Office of Medical Student Research and Scholarship website (<https://www.hopkinsmedicine.org/som/offices/research-scholarship/>) for more information.
